

(Mobile ebook) Dad, Dames, Demons, and a Dwarf: My Trip Down Freedom Road (Illinois)

Dad, Dames, Demons, and a Dwarf: My Trip Down Freedom Road (Illinois)

Mancow Muller

*ePub | DOC | audiobook | ebooks | Download PDF

Download

Read Online

#10859387 in Books 2003-07 2003-07-01 Formats: Abridged, Audiobook Original language: English PDF # 1
1.27 x 7.10 x 4.40l, Binding: Audio Cassette | File size: 73.Mb

Mancow Muller : Dad, Dames, Demons, and a Dwarf: My Trip Down Freedom Road (Illinois) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Dad, Dames, Demons, and a Dwarf: My Trip Down Freedom Road (Illinois):

1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Wild and Crazy!By G. MaloneMancow uses his best ability to entertain readers with this book. Even if he did exaggerate some of the events, still kept me turning pages. Time to reread but still circulating among my friends for their reading pleasure.2 of 3 people found the following review helpful. A Must Read for Anyone with a DadBy WilliamMy dad is still with me, but the Pain Mancow shares in his book is intence. His book has brought me closer to my father, knowing I have only a certaion amount of time till I join Mancow in the Dead dad's Club. Several of his stories will make you laugh your A$$ off, while some of his childhood memories cause you to stop and think about some of the actions you have done in the past as well. A must Read for anyone with a dad!0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five StarsBy davegreat book Mancow Muller is the creator, writer, and ringmaster of what has been called the "funniest, fastest-moving, and most diverse radio show in history," Mancow's Morning Madhouse, syndicated nationally from Chicago. And now, in his first audio book, he rushes headlong into an adventure cross-dressed as a memoir. When Mancow loses his dad to cancer, he has a meltdown, spiraling down Freedom Road on a nonstop death ride: racing the autobahn at breakneck speeds, narrowly escaping a visit to Castro's Cuba, suffering a near-fatal nervous breakdown, and cavorting under dog piles of women. All of these adventures send him on a mind trip through his past, questioning everything. "Do we already live in a police state?" Finding his soul again, he discovers a strange new freedom that only members of The Dead Dad's Club can understand. In this, his first humble masterpiece, Mancow makes you laugh, makes you think, makes you feel and takes you on a journey that kindles your independent spirit and knocks you to the floor with laughter.

From Publishers WeeklyMuller's first book is part memoir and part three-ring circus, a mirror of his Chicago-based syndicated radio show, "Mancow's Morning Madhouse." With its rapid-fire, hyperventilating prose, it resembles a transcript of the motor mouth that made him famous rather than a coherent narrative, as Muller regales his readers with stories of prostitutes, stunts that go bad, pigeons blowing up and, incongruously, touching memories of his beloved late father. A lot of time gets spent on puerile, even offensive stuff-Muller brags of sleeping around ("If I put notches on my rifle for every woman I've been with I wouldn't have a gun anymore") charging people money to look at his bowel movements, the benefits of fame ("success draws women like car grilles attract deer") and his apparently rare ability to "pee in two streams." In a section on traveling in Germany, he writes, "As we eat our Big Mac breakfasts, I watch Berliners dipping fries in mayonnaise. Huh? Anyone who likes that swallows." But despite Muller's crudeness, his stories can sometimes be affecting, showing some of the compassion that helped him become popular. During one of his shows, a paramedic calls in about to commit suicide, and Muller recounts how he tried to comfort him while a colleague called the police. When police find him "hanging from his belt in the paramedic van," Muller wonders, "Did I let this man die? God forgive me. Anonymous voices on the radio, the last place he could reach for help." Fans of the radio show will enjoy this peek into Muller's travels, his sexcapades, his shows and his radio life, and will be as startled as if they were listening to him live; other readers beware. Bw photos. Copyright 2003 Reed Business Information, Inc.About the AuthorMancow Muller is the host of Mancow's Morning Madhouse, a morning drive-time radio show syndicated nationally from Chicago's WKQX (Q101 FM). He has been an on-air host for fifteen years and has written for Playboy and Gear magazines, among others. He lives in Chicago, Illinois.Mancow Muller is the host of Mancow's Morning Madhouse, a morning drive-time radio show syndicated nationally from Chicago's WKQX (Q101 FM). He has been an on-air host for fifteen years and has written for Playboy and Gear magazines, among others. He lives in Chicago, Illinois.