Roger Ebert : Roger Ebert's Four-Star Reviews 1967-2007 before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Roger Ebert's Four-Star Reviews 1967-2007:

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five Stars By Richard Bain Great Book Helps Me Decide What Movies Too Buy! 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. The most accessible film critic of the 20th century By Dr Garry My favourite critic presents a collection of his wonderfully humanistic and accessible reviews. Many other critics make me feel small, with their reviews casually dropping references to directors, films and even whole genres I have never heard of : "Oh, little man, you didn't understand the opening credits to "The Expendables" was an homage to the Ukrainian depressionist cinema of the early 1920's?" One of the great critics of the 20th century, Ebert never condescends, never laps into academic pomposity, never makes you think you have to have a PhD in film theory before you can begin to understand his reviews. Read him now before you can't. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Felicitous style By Rupert C. Lewis Felicitous style and great intelligence. Draws you into a film and the personalities behind movies in a conversational style. Dip into it wherever you care as you don't have to read from front to back. The reverse will do just as well. Have been reading Pauline Kael as well and she is intellectually sharp on the history of literature and film. Ebert is no less equipped but the daily quota and contact with his audience make his writing much more accessible. Kael is engaged with the ideological battle of defending the popular art form in film against critics who look down on it. By the time Ebert comes along cinematic art is a given.

Spanning the length of Roger Ebert's career as the leading American movie critic, this book contains all of his four-star reviews written during that time. A great guide for movie watching.

About the Author Roger Ebert is the Pulitzer Prize-winning film critic from the Chicago Sun-Times. His reviews are syndicated to more than 200 newspapers in the United States and Canada. The American Film Institute and the School of the Art Institute of Chicago have awarded him honorary degrees, and the Online Film Critics Society named his Web site, rogerebert.com, the best online movie-review site.
